POLITICAL NOTES.

—The Wisconsin Legislature has passed a law providing that hotel keepers can not collect their bills from boarders who are billeted above the second floor, unless their room is provided with fire-escapes. A good law.

—Gov. Hartranft, we are pleased to notice, has been vetoing some bills, thereby chopping off the heads of several carefully concealed Legislative snakes. We hope he will continue the good work he has commenced.

—The Constitutional Convention are industriously reporting the new Constitution by sections, and from the number and length of those already reported, the instrument when completed will be about as large as all the other State Constitutions put together.

—The President has made two appointments from Pennsylvania of cadets at large to the West Point Military Academy: Charles C. Heisley, son of Chaplain Heisley, served as drummer during the late war, and John F. R. Landis, nephew of the late Gen. John F. Reynolds.

—Secretary Boutwell was elected United States Senator by the Massachusetts legislature, last Thursday, and at once retired from the Cabinet. Judge Richardson, of Illinois, Assistant Secretary, was promptly appointed Secretary of the Treasury and his nomination will be sent to the Senate to-morrow.

—Poor bleeding Kansas. The odium cast upon her by the shameless conduct of Caldwell and Pomeroy seems not to have been all that was in store for her. Now comes the impeachment of Judge Delahay of Kansas for unlawful detention of public money and drunkeness, on which charges he is to be tried.

—A bill for the redivision of the Philadelphia Congressional districts was reported it the House at Harrisburg last week. By the proposed arrangement four of the five districts would be Republican. The Third district, which is conceded to the Democrats, would be composed of the Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eleventh, Twelfth, and Sixteenth wards.

—In Committee of the Whole the Constitutional Convention on Wednesday decided not to require an oath of office from the Legislatures and to vest the trial of contested-election cases in the courts. Several other sections of the article were adopted, among them one forbidding more than one subject in any one bill, and another requiring every bill to be read at length on three days in each house.

—Mr. Strong made a strong speech in the State Senate lately in favor of the repeal of the tax upon the gross receipts of railroad, canal, and transportation companies. The House passed the bill for the opening of the streets through the Girard College grounds. It is a sample of special legislation, and ought to fall under the displeasure of his Excellency Governor Hartranft.

—The Cubans will look in vain in the Preisdent's inaugural address for anything about them. Free Cuba is all right enough, but the average "Cuban patriot" in this country is a bombastic humbug who solicits donations of money and remains in New Yosk to spend it, while a few poor shabby fellows in the woods of Cuba are doing all the fighting that is done in behalf of a Cuban republic, which the Herald makes so much fuss about.

—Secretary Boutwell was last week elected United States Senator from Massachusetts, to succeed Henry Wilson. Who and what he is, his ability and integrity, are well known to our readers. Charles sumner and George S. Boutwell are representatives that do honor to Massachusetts, and who prove that in one State of the Union at least the senatorships are not sold at auction or awarded as prizes to the lowest class of politicians.

—The so-called Senator-elect Spencer, the candidate of one of the rival Alabama Legislatures for a seat in the United States Senate, played a very scurvy trick the other day. Not having confidence either in the honesty or the legality of his credentials, he tried to be sworn in in a surreptitious manner. The attempt was noticed by Bayard, of Delaware, who protested. A lively debate, lasting two days, followed, the result being that Spencer was finally given the much contested seat.

PRESIDENT GRANT'S SECOND TERM.

Ulysses S. Grant is the seventh President who has been honored with a re-election. His predecessors were Wasington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson and Lincoln—all honored names in the political annals of the Republic. It is, moreover, a fact that the second term of all these gentlemen (save that of Lincoln, who was cut off at the beginning of his second by the hand of the assassin), were more successful than the first, which constitutes strong proof in behalf of the propriety of the principle of a second term, and of the correctness of the popular voice.

The opposition speakers and papers find very little in Grant to either censure or condemn. This, in itself, is a high compliment to his integrity and ability. He admits, himself, that he is a novice in statesmanship, yet during the just expired session of Congress, he displayed so much wisdom and judgment that that body actually became ashamed over its neglect of legislative duties.

His annual message, so full of good suggestions, was followed by several special messages on Utah and Louisiana affairs, on the fishery question and on Southern claims for destruction of property during the war. He has always stood by civil service reform to secure the best men for office, notwithstanding the opposition of many leading politicians. He issued his proclamation that no Federal office holder should hereafter be permitted to hold a State office at the same time excepting only a few positions like school trustees, which are more in the nature of duties than offices of honor or profit.

In all these recommendations he has proven himself a firm, judicious and intrepid political leader, to which all Republicans can point with commendable pride, and had Congress been guided by his words of wisdom and counsel, the disgrace which they have heaped upon themselves would not be written in our history.

We are fully persuaded that the second term of President Grant will become illustrious in the annals of history, and this will not be so much the result of brilliancy of genius, as of painstaking and laborious care.

In view of the many evils which would have necessarily resulted by placing the Government under the guidance of Horace Greeley or B. Gratz Brown, we congratulate the people most heartily on the prospect of a wise, safe and economical administration of affairs until March 4, 1877.

BELOW we give the vote of the Pennsylvania delegation in Congress on the big steal. Speaker Blaine, be it said to his credit, refused to accept this action, inasmuch as it concerned him, and interlined the word "hereafter" in the text of the bill, making it read, "the speaker hereafter," &c.

We do not feel like casting blame anywhere, and we have no apologies to offer for any Republican who voted for the bill. Both parties were, in a measure, responsible; but there is one noticeable feature: viz: More than half of the affirmative votes consisted of Democrats and Liberals who in the last canvass shouted so loudly for reform, which, considering the fact that they embrace but about two-thirds of the House, is rather a large percentage:

AYES:—Randall, D; Myers, R; Harmer, R; Townsend, R; Getz, D; Dickey, R; Storm, D; Meyers, D; SHERWOOD, D; Griffith, D; Foster, D; Negley, R; McJunkin, R.

NEWSPAPORIAL.

The first number of the Duncanon Record has made its apperance. J. A. Hauck, is editor and proprietor. It is very neat and tasty in its make up, but being "independent in everything" it of course, takes its place among the list of half-and-half. no force hebdomadals.

The Morning Standard of Williamsport; edited by Messrs. Furey and Dillon, both formerly of this place, has been coming to this office regularly for about a week past. It is a neat, newsy live little sheet, and has a healthy thrifty appearance. The Register now has a foeman worthy of its steel, for Fury is among the best writers in the state, if he is a little smutty sometimes. Of course we hope they will succeed.

THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE AND THE COUNTRY PRESS.

We regard the abolition of the franking privilege, in so far as it affects the country press even though to be in the most remote degree, as a mean and contemptible species of legislation.—How easy it was for Congress to take upon itself a sudden fit of economy in this particular, and strike a blow at the press—the power that placed them in office and keeps them there, (as we think they will yet find to their cost)—and then turn round and steal (we call it by no milder term), five thousand dollars of back pay from the National Treasury. How much are they affected by the abolition of this privilege? Not any. They have simply made the excuse by putting one dollar into the treasury to take two out.—What a noble sacrifice.

Why should congressional legislation throw obstacles in the way of a truly educational interest? All attempts to compel pre-payment on newspapers addressed to regular subscribers, ought to be abandoned. We are opposed to all interference with the free carriage of papers, because a postage tax would greatly impair the usefulness of hundreds of county papers which are so great a convenience to our citizens.

It is one of the special missions of the Republican party to encourage education, and aid in the dissemination of correct political views, and we hope that its leading men will not continue to sanction a policy so reactionary and unwise. It is precisely in proportion that the local press is independent and influential, and our citizens are fully informed that the Republican party had been sustained, and, therefore, to strike a blow at the country press would be an effort to remove one of its main pillars.

The county paper has converted thousands of youth into readers, writers and thinkers who would have been utterly indifferent to literature if they had not had a chance to appear in print upon some local subject in their boyhood or girlhood years.

Strangers always judge the enterprise and business prospects of a place by the character of its papers. If its advertisements consist chiefly of patent medicines and other foreign advertisements, and mortgage and sheriff sales, it is a notice of "hands off;" but if its columns are well filled with interesting reading, local items and live home advertisements, the verdict is at once: this must be a live place, just the home for an enterprising and educated man.

It is true that the reasons we have given why the country press should be liberally supported are only such as have occurred to us all, and probably been stated in better form hitherto; but when this great and beneficent interest is threatened with adverse legislation it is necessary to restate the case.

THIS is the way the Paterson Guardian, deomcratic, comes down on some of the unfaithful members of the true blue deomcracy.

PASS THEM ALONG.—The following recreant Democrats, misrepresenting honest constituencies in Congress, upheld the Credit Mobilier infamy and voted not to condemn either Ames or Brooks. Let this Black List of traitors to political principle and to public duty be preserved for future reference:

George M. Adams, Kentucky.
James B. Beck, Kentucky.
Abram Comingo, Missouri.
John C. Coner, Texas.
Charles A. Eldridge, Wisconsin.
Abraham E. Garret, Tennessee.
Edward L. Golladay, Tennessee.
Henry D. McHenry, Kentucky.
Joseph H. Sloss, Alabama.
Daniel W. Voorhees, Indiana.
William Williams, New York.

THE latest returns from New Hampshire seem to indicate no choice of Governor by the people. The returns from one hundred and thirty towns give Straw, Republican, 24,971; Weston, Democratic 21,857; Blackmer, Temperance, 826, Mason, Liberal, 466. The temperance and liberal vote defeated the re-election of Gov. Straw by the people, the Legislature is strongly Republican, the Senate probably a tie. This will secure a Republican Governor.

A VENANGO HORROR,

FRAUD AND SUICIDE.

A DEFAULTING BANK CASHIER COMMITS SUICIDE—HE ATTEMPTS TO DESTROY THE WHOLE EFFECTS OF THE BANK BY FIRE.

FRANKLIN, Venango Co., March 14.

This morning about nine o'clock, Thomas Anderson, cashier of Lamberton's bank, shot himself in the head, just above the temple. Anderson is still alive but is dying.

This morning he opened the bank at the usual hour and transacted business with several customers. After he was left alone in the bank some persons on the opposite side of the street noticed him running in and out of the door and acting excitedly. A minute or two afterward he started on a full run down Thirteenth street, and the persons who had been watching his actions saw smoke in the bank, and supposing the house was on fire, ran across the street and entered the bank, when they found some of Mr. Lamberton's family throwing water into the fire.

The grate was heaped up with bank notes, bonds and papers. These were drawn out as rapidly as possible, but in a charred state, some of them being burned to ashes.

Mr. Anderson ran on towards his house, which is nearly three squares from the bank, entered the house by the back way, and handed his wife a letter, crying to her: "I am going to do an awful deed."

He had a pistol in his hand and his wife supposed he was about to kill somebody. She tried to take it away but failed, and Anderson stepped out into the yard and committed the fatal deed. His wife fell fainting into the arms of some lady friends.

The substances of the letter is that he was carrying over drafts for several persons to a large amount, and that he was determined not to leave any trace, and therefore destroyed the bonds and money. He also left in the bank a letter of confesson, but the contents have not been made public.

He left a note on the bank counter, saying that he had destroyed all the specie deposits and bills receivable, and that his family was ruined and disgraced. A rough estimate puts the loss by the burning in the grate at $100,000, out of which sum will be recognized and saved over $68,000 of Mr. Lamberton's, and individual government bonds.

The balance being securities, the United States Treasurer has been telegraphed to send an expert on at once to examine what remains of the burned money and bonds.

The bank was about to change hands, and this precipitated an examination of Mr. Anderson's books. There is no way of accounting for his actions this morning, except upon the theory of his being a defaulter to the estimated amount of about $25,000.

The lossess will not affect Mr. Lamberton's depositors in the least. Mr. Lamberton had the utmost confidence in Mr. Anderson, trusting him with everything as he would one of his own family. Mr. Anderson was about thirty-four years of age. It is freely stated by business men here that Mr. Anderson has been made a catspaw of by some body.

He has not been known to use money in speculation or otherwise, except for his household expenses, and it is generally concluded that whatever amount he is a defaulter for has gone to the advantage of other parties.

[SECOND DISPATCH.]

FRANKLIN, Pa., March 14.

Anderson, the cashier of Lamberton's bank, who shot himself this morning, has since died.

MORE COUNTERFEITERS.

THE PRINCE OF HIS CRAFT.

THE KING OF THE RENO GANG IN CUSTODY—$250,000 OF WORTHLESS PAPER SECURED—THE TOOLS OF THE COUNTERFEITERS—THE EFFICIENCY OF GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS—THRILLING ENCOUNTER WITH A DESPERADO—AFFECTING SEPARATION OF HUSBAND AND WIFE—THE BINGHAM HOUSE CONVERTED INTO A JAIL, &C., &C., &C.

From the Philadelphia Press, Thursday.]

Since the arrests that were effected the other day of the four men who had a hearing before the Commissioner, the telegraph of the country has been kept in constant use for the apprehension and arrest of the other prominent members of this

of counterfeiters. Detective Charles E. Anchisi, of the Washington Bureau of Detectives, and Chief of the roving Treasury Commissioners, is the gentleman who had the entire charge of this movement. As the first result of this telegraphic operation, the house of one Minnie Price, a well known accomplice of the count, erfeiters of the country which is located on Sharswood street, was approached and entered by Mr. Anchisi, who, after a diligent search, discovered a letter addressed to Price, and purporting to have been sent by one William D. Prosser, who is also a well known trader in counterfeit money, and who has of late been circulating the "queer" to an

ENORMOUS EXTENT.

From this letter the information was derived that Prosser was in West Chester, and thither a detective was at once despatched. A negotiation having been entered into by the officer and Prosser for the changing of counterfeit $5 notes for genuine money, his arrest was at once effected. Proof is also in readiness of the fact that this man had sold 'queer' in January last, and, so far as he is concerned, a conviction is a foregone conclusion. Yesterday afternoon a dispatch was received by Mr. Anchisi from Mr. T. C. Nettlesbip, of the New York detective department of the treasury, containing certain suggestions, and announcing the fact that the notorious John Ogle, who escaped in October last from the officers who arrested him at Cairo, had been rearrested at Pittsburg.

The specific charge against this man was the having in his possession the sum of $1,700 in bogus money, which amount was taken from him at the time of his first arrest. This dispatch concluded Mr. Anchisi as to the course he should pursue with relation to "Miles" Ogle, who for years, since the hanging of the

has been the supreme head and sovereign ruler of counterfeiters of the country. It might be interesting for people to know that the aliases of this ubiquitous personage are numerous, and may be stated as follows: George W. Ogle (his real name), alias "Miles" Ogle, alias "Charles Deering," alias 'George Burns,' and alias "George Bond."

To effect this man's arrest Mr. Anchisi went at once to the Central Station and there solicited the aid of the detective force. A party of men were at once furnished, who proceeded to the residence of Ogle, No. 2114 North Seventh street. When the house was reached one of the officers was stationed below the premises, one above, and then Detectives Anchisi and Levy entered through the front door. Ogle was not at home, and his wife, who is enciente, was found in the second story front room. The object of the visit was at once broached, and so distressed and did the unfortunate woman become that it was found necessary to leave her in charge of an officer while the house was being searched, preparatory to the ensnaring of Ogle. In the third story of the building were found two large boxes, one contained a press that had been taken apart and packed for the purpose of removal. It was covered with ink along the surface and in the vicinity of the plates, which gave unmistakable evidence of recent use. In this box were also found acids, black, red and green inks, several thousands of paper sheets, a camera for the photographing of the notes, chemicals, tools, copper, engraving material, and, in fact, everything necessary for the

MANUFACTURING OF CURRENCY.

The other chest was filled entirely with engraving tools. In addition to the foregoing, the sum of $2,500 in genuine Treasury notes was found, together with the engraving of 10 and 23 cent stamps and one dollar bills. An inspection of the cellar and general upturning of the earth revealed a hole that had been newly dug, and from which something had been removed.

THE ARREST.

At precisely 3:30 o'clock P M. Ogle made his appearance. When he entered the house Anchisi and Levy were up stairs. Detective Smith, who was secreted behind the door through which he entered, at once seized him, while special officer Meers placed a revolver to his ear and at once disarmed him.

He was then searched, and one hundred and fifty dollars in genuine money taken from him. After an interview with his wife, which was affecting in the extreme, he was removed to the Bingham House, room 112, where he now is, under a heavy guard. The appearance of this man is rather imposing than otherwise. He is tall, well built, handsome features, and betrays very little evidence in the character of his face or demeanor that well harmonizes with his desperate character and blackened reputation. The doings of his kin has been as unenviable as his own character is; his being now in the Michigan penitentiary for the offense with which he is charged. By these important arrests the circulation of at least $250,000 in counterfeit money has been prevented, and the capture of all the lesser lights of this dangerous craft insured.

The prisoners had a hearing before United States Commisssioner Biddle today at 10 o'clock A. M. Ogle was committed in default of $12,000 bail, and Prosser in default of $5,000.

We are opposed to all interference with the free carriage of papers, because a postage tax would greatly impair the usefulness of hundreds of county papers which are so great a convenience to our citizens.

It is one of the special missions of the Republican party to encourage education, and aid in the dissemination of correct political views, and we hope that its leading men will not continue to sanction a policy so reactionary and unwise. It is precisely in proportion that the local press is independent and influential, and our citizens are fully informed that the Republican party had been sustained, and, therefore, to strike a blow at the country press would be an effort to remove one of its main pillars.

The county paper has converted thousands of youth into readers, writers and thinkers who would have been utterly indifferent to literature if they had not had a chance to appear in print upon some local subject in their boyhood or girlhood years.

Strangers always judge the enterprise and business prospects of a place by the character of its papers. If its advertisements consist chiefly of patent medicines and other foreign advertisements, and mortgage and sheriff sales, it is a notice of "hands off;" but if its columns are well filled with interesting reading, local items and live home advertisements, the verdict is at once: this must be a live place, just the home for an enterprising and educated man.

It is true that the reasons we have given why the country press should be liberally supported are only such as have occurred to us all, and probably been stated in better form hitherto; but when this great and beneficent interest is threatened with adverse legislation it is necessary to restate the case.

THIS is the way the Paterson Guardian, deomcratic, comes down on some of the unfaithful members of the true blue deomcracy.

A VENANGO HORROR,

FRAUD AND SUICIDE.

A DEFAULTING BANK CASHIER COMMITS SUICIDE—HE ATTEMPTS TO DESTROY THE WHOLE EFFECTS OF THE BANK BY FIRE.

FRANKLIN, Venango Co., March 14.

This morning about nine o'clock, Thomas Anderson, cashier of Lamberton's bank, shot himself in the head, just above the temple. Anderson is still alive but is dying.

This morning he opened the bank at the usual hour and transacted business with several customers. After he was left alone in the bank some persons on the opposite side of the street noticed him running in and out of the door and acting excitedly. A minute or two afterward he started on a full run down Thirteenth street, and the persons who had been watching his actions saw smoke in the bank, and snpposing the house was on fire, ran across the street and entered the bank, when they found some of Mr. Lamberton's family throwing water into the fire.

The grate was heaped up with bank notes, bonds and papers. These were drawn out as rapidly as possible, but in a charred state, some of them being burned to ashes.

Mr. Anderson ran on towards his house, which is nearly three squares from the bank, entered the house by the back way, and handed his wife a letter, crying to her: "I am going to do an awful deed."

He had a pistol in his hand and his wife supposed he was about to kill somebody. She tried to take it away but failed, and Anderson stepped out into the yard and committed the fatal deed. His wife fell fainting into the arms of some lady friends.

The substances of the letter is that he was carrying over drafts for several persons to a large amount, and that he was determined not to leave any trace, and therefore destroyed the bonds and money. He also left in the bank a letter of confesson, but the contents have not been made public.

He left a note on the bank counter, saying that he had destroyed all the specie deposits and bills receivable, and that his family was ruined and disgraced. A rough estimate puts the loss by the burning in the grate at $100,000, out of which sum will be recognized and saved over $68,000 of Mr. Lamberton's, and individual government bonds.

The balance being securities, the United States Treasurer has been telegraphed to send an expert on at once to examine what remains of the burned money and bonds.

The bank was about to change hands, and this precipitated an examination of Mr. Anderson's books. There is no way of accounting for his actions this morning, except upon the theory of his being a defaulter to the estimated amount of about $25,000.

The losses will not affect Mr. Lamberton's depositors in the least. Mr. Lamberton had the utmost confidence in Mr. Anderson, trusting him with everything as he would one of his own family. Mr. Anderson was about thirty-four years of age. It is freely stated by business men here that Mr. Anderson has been made a catspaw of by some body.

He has not been known to use money in speculation or otherwise, except for his household expenses, and it is generally concluded that whatever amount he is a defaulter for has gone to the advantage of other parties.

[SECOND DISPATCH.]

FRANKLIN, Pa., March 14.

Anderson, the cashier of Lamberton's bank, who shot himself this morning, has since died.

MORE COUNTERFEITERS.

THE PRINCE OF HISCRAFT.

THE KING OF THE RENO GANG IN CUSTODY—$250,000 OF WORTHLESS PAPER SECURED—THE TOOLS OF THE COUNTERFEITERS—THE EFFICIENCY OF GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS—THRILLING ENCOUNTER WITH A DESPERADO—AFFECTING SEPARATION OF HUSBAND AND WIFE—THE BINGHAM HOUSE CONVERTED INTO A JAIL, &C., &C., &C.

From the Philadelphia Press, Thursday.]

Since the arrests that were effected the other day of the four men who had a hearing before the Commissioner, the telegraph of the country has been kept in constant use for the apprehension and arrest of the other prominent members of this

of counterfeiters. Detective Charles E. Anchisi, of the Washington Bureau of Detectives, and Chief of the roving Treasury Commissioners, is the gentleman who had the entire charge of this movement. As the first result of this telegraphic operation, the house of one Minnie Price, a well known accomplice of the count, erfeiters of the country which is located on Sharswood street, was approached and entered by Mr. Anchisi, who, after a diligent search, discovered a letter addressed to Price, and purporting to have been sent by one William D. Prosser, who is also a well known trader in counterfeit money, and who has of late been circulating the "queer" to an

ENORMOUS EXTENT.

From this letter the information was derived that Prosser was in West Chester, and thither a detective was at once despatched. A negotiation having been entered into by the officer and Prosser for the changing of counterfeit $5 notes for genuine money, his arrest was at once effected. Proof is also in readiness of the fact that this man had sold 'queer' in January last, and, so far as he is concerned, a conviction is a foregone conclusion. Yesterday afternoon a dispatch was received by Mr. Anchisi from Mr. T. C. Nettleship, of the New York detective department of the treasury, containing certain suggestions, and announcing the fact that the notorious John Ogle, who escaped in October last from the officers who arrested him at Cairo, had been rearrested at Pittsburg.

The specific charge against this man was the having in his possession the sum of $1,700 in bogus money, which amount was taken from him at the time of his first arrest. This dispatch concluded Mr. Anchisi as to the course he should pursue with relation to "Miles" Ogle, who for years, since the hanging of the

has been the supreme head and sovereign ruler of counterfeiters of the country. It might be interesting for people to know that the aliases of this ubiquitous personage are numerous, and may be stated as follows: George W. Ogle (his real name), alias "Miles" Ogle, alias "Charles Deering," alias 'George Burns,' and alias "George Bond."

To effect this man's arrest Mr. Anchisi went at once to the Central Station and there solicited the aid of the detective force. A party of men were at once furnished, who proceeded to the residence of Ogle, No. 2114 North Seventh street. When the house was reached one of the officers was stationed below the premises, one above, and then Detectives Anchisi and Levy entered through the front door. Ogle was not at home, and his wife, who is enciente, was found in the second story front room. The object of the visit was at once broached, and so distressed and did the unfortunate woman become that it was found necessary to leave her in charge of an officer while the house was being searched, preparatory to the ensnaring of Ogle. In the third story of the building were found two large boxes, one contained a press that had been taken apart and packed for the purpose of removal. It was covered with ink along the surface and in the vicinity of the plates, which gave unmistakable evidence of recent use. In this box were also found acids, black, red and green inks, several thousands of paper sheets, a camera for the photographing of the notes, chemicals, tools, copper, engraving material, and, in fact, everything necessary for the

MANUFACTURING OF CURRENCY.

The other chest was filled entirely with engraving tools. In addition to the foregoing, the sum of $2,500 in genuine Treasury notes was found, together with the engraving of 10 and 23 cent stamps and one dollar bills. An inspection of the cellar and general upturning of the earth revealed a hole that had been newly dug, and from which something had been removed.

THE ARREST.

At precisely 3:30 o'clock P M. Ogle made his appearance. When he entered the house Anchisi and Levy were up stairs. Detective Smith, who was secreted behind the door through which he entered, at once seized him, while special officer Meers placed a revolver to his ear and at once disarmed him.

He was then searched, and one hundred and fifty dollars in genuine money taken from him. After an interview with his wife, which was affecting in the extreme, he was removed to the Bingham House, room 112, where he now is, under a heavy guard. The appearance of this man is rather imposing than otherwise. He is tall, well built, handsome features, and betrays very little evidence in the character of his face or demeanor that well harmonizes with his desperate character and blackened reputation. The doings of his kin has been as unenviable as his own character is; his being now in the Michigan penitentiary for the offense with which he is charged. By these important arrests the circulation of at least $250,000 in counterfeit money has been prevented, and the capture of all the lesser lights of this dangerous craft insured.

The prisoners had a hearing before United States Commisssioner Biddle today at 10 o'clock A. M. Ogle was committed in default of $12,000 bail, and Prosser in default of $5,000.

AN APPEAL FOR TEMPERANCE.

BY A. A. S.

God be merciful, God be just,
God, in whom we place our trust.
Faithfully, earnestly we turn to Thee
In the hour of need, Oh! make us free,
Free from this dread form of vice
That the weak are led into, the wicked entice;
Cursing the earth with oppression and wrong,
Joined heart and hand, to the cold selfish thing,
Filling the lives of their loved ones with care,
Crushing the heart of the wife with dispair,
Cooling her love and destroying her trust—
Laying the heads of their children in the dust,
Beggaring them, and making their life
Weary and way-worn with sorrow and strife,
Driving them out on the cold icy street
Asking for bread from those they may meet,
Help us to remove this curse from our land
Help us by the aid of Thine own mighty hand;
To dash the cup from the drunkard's lip
And forever to stop the filling of it;
Thou only can soften the cold hearts of steel,
Thou only can teach men to love and to feel,
Give to mankind in this gloomy dark hour
Persuasion, strength, decision, and power;
Help them to complete the work they've begun
Giving them faith the work will be done,
Through patience and hope they'll reach the goal
And the waters of death, will not curse the soul,
Show our rulers the right from the wrong,
Show them the weak have claims on the strong:
Show them this weakness will lead to the grave
Of sin, shame, and sorrow, with no one to save
Lend them Thine aid, to act in the right;
Lending them talents, to work with all might,
Ridding the beautiful Home of the Free,
From a bondage and curse which never should be.
Oh! may our efforts and words of good cheer
Usher the dawn of a most glorious year,
When the victim redeemed from the rumseller's chain,
Shall walk in Thine image unfettered again,
God of all mercy, God of all power,
Help us, hear us, in his our dark hour.

Our Story Teller.

MY SISTER ALICE.

PART I.

How the time flies! I can scarcely believe that it is nearly two years ago since I sat on the very same chair I am occupying now, and became an involuntary eaves-dropper to a lovers' quarrel between my sister Alice and Dick Oswald. Dear old Dick! how she, or any one else, could possibly fall out with any one so thoroughly amiable, I never could comprehend. Gentle as a woman, frank as a child, and handsome as Adonis was Dick; and yet the only being in whose good graces he was desirous to establish himself was the very one who appeared the most difficult to please; and that was my sister. Well, perhaps she had a right to be a little capricious and willful, that is if an extraordinary claim to beauty could give her that right; and she was as haughty as an Empress, wielding her sceptre imperiously over her slaves, whose name was legion.

My father, Rev. John Grey, a quiet unobtrusive man, was the vicar of Marsefield, and as Marsefield was not a very large place, to be its vicar was a post more honorable than lucrative. But his means were amply sufficient for our household, which was carried on in modest fashion. My mother died when I and my sister were quite young; so young that we have no distinct remembrance of her, except that some one with a pleasant smile used to pat our heads approvingly when we lisped out our prayers morning and night. Alice came of age last June. She was born in the loveliest of summer months, and perhaps that is partly the reason that she is as bright and beautiful as a flower; but I, Susan, came into the world two years after her, in dreary, bleak March, when the winds howled so piteously over my advent, that the poor little snow-drops bent their heads beneath the fury of the blast, and dropped and paled away.

We lived very quietly at the parsonage, which was a pretty quaint old house, one mass of luxuriant ivy trails and wild roses. The "feast of reason and the flow of soul" were far more in consonance with our pockets than turtle and Cliquot; but on festive occasions, such as Christmas or New Year's Day, we were accustomed to put the unassuming reception room in holiday attire, and to gather together the party-goers of Marsefield, in order that we might tread the "light fantastic toe," to the best fiddle procurable, accompanied by the piano, which was touched with more willingness than skill by our lady friends in turn.

Last Christmas Eve but one, after Alice and I had labored hard in preparation for one of our soirees dansantes, the name by which we were pleased to dignify our carpet hops, and which was to take place on the day after Christmas Day—that day, of course, being spent by us in the quietude of our domestic circle—my sister and I sat down to have a "nice chat." I was very partial to those tete-a-tetes with her, for when she was in one of her good moods, as we used to call them, no one could be more amusing and pleasant. Alice had been out so much in the world, and although that world was only the stupid Marsefield one, its grandeur was magnified very considerably by me, an invalid and a stay-at-home. We had not many visitors, but among those who used to call most frequently were Arthur Farquhar and Dick Oswald. And both were in love with Alice. The former was the eldest son of the member for our county, who lived in a grand mansion that we could just catch a glimpse of from our top window. The Farquhars had a long pedigree and well-lined coffers, so that Arthur Farquhar was a good parti, and he was handsome as well, with thin straight-out features, and fair Saxon hair and beard; but there was an expression in his eyes which I distrusted, and a cynical smile on his lips which put me in mind always of a man dressed in red, with big feathers stuck in his cap, who acted the part of Mephistopheles in a burlesque of "Faust," that was done by a company of strolling-players in a booth at Marsefield a great many years ago.—The whole thing is stamped on my memory by the fact of my having been locked up in an empty store-room, with no companions save mice, of which I have an inordinate dread, as a punishment for having stolen out to indulge the curiosity I felt to see a theatre.

I used to tell my sister frankly my impression of Arthur Farquhar, but she only smiled and bade me not be such a little fool as to disparage such an eligible suitor. But I did not mind, for I knew quite well that in her heart she agreed with me, and in spite of his attentions and flattery, doubted his sincerity; besides, although it was kept a secret because it was her fancy to do so, she was betrothed to Dick Oswald, who was only a clerk in a merchant's house, struggling to gain enough money to keep himself and a wife whenever Alice chose to marry him. But what did it signify about his poverty, when the heart he gave her was so honest and loving? It never entered my brain about any one ever demanding my hand in marriage. I had no vanity, and if such a feeling had sprung up within me, it would have been extinguished in its infancy, for I could not fail hearing at times such remarks as these: "How strange that one sister should be as ugly as the other is beautiful!" or "Susan has no beauty to boast of, certainly; but she is very good natured, poor thing!" Still, when I used sometimes to see Dick, with his big brown eyes worshipping Alice, I could not help repining a little that such pleasant incense would never be mine. But to return to my story.

Very tired, (for Alice had only suggested, while I had carried out, the decorations of the room,) with my arms resting on the table in attitude savoring far more of ease than of elegance, and with my feet stretched out as near the fire as my modest stature allowed of, I sat looking at my sister, who was opposite me, with admiration in my eyes in spite of my sleepiness.

Alice leant back in a huge arm chair, the crimson of which formed a rich background for her face, on which the fire-light fell freely. Her thick chestnut hair was gathered carelessly right off her temples, and hung over her shoulders in a dishevelled mass. Her features were exquisite, but tiny, excepting her eyes, and they were large and soft like a gazelle's, and of a deep violet. Upon her lap lay a note, with a grand coat of arms in red and gold adorning the envelope, and beside it a bunch of rare exotics, whose perfume filled the warm room. And on her white finger sparkled a brilliant of the first water, which she kept admiring and holding up so to catch the light. She irritated me at last; and shaking off my indolence, I roused myself to speak as wrathfully to her as I dared, for my sister was not given to meekness, and she ruled me right royally.

"Alice how can you keep looking at that ring? It is my opinion that you ought to have returned it with an angry note directly when it came."

"Is it, indeed puss in boots?" laughed my sister. "Don't you know that children should only speak when spoken to?"

Considering I was nineteen, although my diminutive proportions did not indorse that fact, it seemed hard to be treated like an infant; but I plucked up courage and resumed:

"What business had Mr. Farquhar to send you that, I should like to know?"

"Should you, indeed? Well, then, I will tell you. He sent it because he knew I should admire it, as I do."

And she began dancing the hateful bauble backward and forward before her eyes, until they seemed to catch all the glitter of the diamond.

"But you do not intend keeping it, of course," I assented confidently.

"Of course but I shall, little goose; what is to prevent my doing so?"

"Dick wouldn't like it, I pleaded, coaxingly. I was very partial to my brother-in-law in prospect, and I did not care to have his feelings tortured, as they often were by his lady-love.

"Dick wouldn't like it!" Alice said, sneeringly mocking my words, and pursing up her pretty scarlet lips like a spoiled baby. "Pray, has Dick lost his tongue, that you are always advocating his cause and trying to keep his feelings in a glass case, so that nothing shall ruffle them? Susan, I wish you would leave me and Dick to settle matters without your interference."

"Very well," I replied, with tears of mortification at her unkindness obscuring my vision. "Here he is!" as a familiar pull at the bell announced the visitor, and I could not help adding spitefully, "I wonder if he will admire the ring as much as you do."

"He will when he sees it," she laughed, and while she put out one hand to her lover with an innocent face, with the other she quietly deposited both note and ring in her pocket, and stole a triumphant glance at me while she did so. I wondered how, caring for Dick as she undoubtedly did, she could be guilty of duplicity toward him, but my sister's nature was often an enigma to me.

Dick sat down in as close proximity as he could to the object of his affection; but as that was his usual habit, I did not consider it incumbent on me to leave the room, but learning my weary head on my arms, I closed my eyelids; my ears were, however, open.

"Darling," and Dick's voice, always soft and low, appeared to sound doubly musical as he uttered the word of endearment, "do you know that we have not met for three days," (he had been up to London,) "and that you have not even looked at me yet?" he said reproachfully.

Alice was not in one of her good moods, evidently; and her tone was very cold and unsympathetic as she answered:

"Why should I look at you? I know the exact color of your hair and the shape of your nose as well as my A B C! You always want me to be looking at you, or something!" and she seized her bouquet pettishly, and began examining the varied blossoms of which it was composed.

Dick must have felt aggrieved, but he was a very patient and forbearing nature and he was exempt from the vanity that most of his sex possess; otherwise he would have sorely resented her words and the tone in which they were uttered. His gaze followed hers, I concluded, for he exclaimed in suspicious accents:

"Where did those flowers come from, Alice? They are not the produce of Marsefield, I am sure."

I glanced up quietly, and unnoticed by them. My sister dropped the bouquet into her lap indifferently, and she remained silent and perfectly passive, even when Dick seized the offending flowers and flung them into the fire, and watched the petals of the rare exotics turn into little shriveled masses, and then into nothingness. When they were gone forever, he turned and spoke hastily and passionately:

"Alice, who gave you those flowers? Tell me at once, for I have a right to know!"

"I deny your right to question me, completely," my sister replied haughtily. "But I have no objection to satisfy your curiosity; it was Mr. Farquhar who sent them to me."

Poor Dick grew so deadly white, probably from pangs of jealousy, that I feared he would have fallen off his seat, and I was on the point of offering a restorative when I saw him "pull himself up" like a man, while the color stole slowly back to his cheek.

"Alice, you know how much I love you, and that there is nothing in the world I would not suffer for your sake, but I will not be trifled with. If Mr. Farquhar's bouquets are acceptable to you, take them by all means, and take the donor as well, if you wish it; but let your intentions be above board; give me my dismissal. It is unworthy of you to coquet with two men; and if Farquhar can bear it, I cannot. I have often watched your manners toward him, and my very soul has been torn with jealousy. If I am not good enough or wealthy enough for you, marry him by all means, and joy go with you," he wound up angrily, with two big scarlet spots on his cheeks, and his eyes blazing fiercely. My sister looked up at him with astonishment and admiration in her glance. It was the first time he had bravely asserted himself, and, woman-like, she prized him doubly when there was a chance of losing him. She threw off her grandiose style, and grew soft. Now, many women are very soft and pleasant. But the "softness" of Alice was an exceptional thing. My sister's large violet eyes waxed wondrously lovely when they pleaded, and it was impossible to resist their fascination. So, as a matter of course, Dick succumbed, and became her most obedient before a dozen words had fallen from her lips. Men, as a rule, are slaves to beauty, so, after all, he was only following in the lead of his sex.

"Dear old Dick!" I heard Alice murmur in her most liquid accents quite close into his ear; and to insure her victory she slipped a little white hand into his. "Do you not know that I have only been trying you, to see if you could be dignified and angry? Don't you know that I love you with all my heart, and only flirt a bit now and then just to make you jealous? For I like you to be jealous, Dick; it is a proof that you really care for me, and you do care for me, don't you?"

"Care for you, my own? A thousand times better than myself!" he answered fervently. But I kept my face hidden in case I might see my sister's blushes as she let him rain down kisses on her.

"Alice, you will not flirt with Farquhar any more, my child? Promise you won't!" he implored; and any one could have known how earnest he was by the way his voice shook when he preferred his request.

"No, Dick, I won't. And if I do, I give you permission to punish me by leaving me forever," she exclaimed, with so much more feeling in her tones than she usually had, that I thoroughly believed in her assertion.

Then there was more embracing, intermixed with endearing words, and suddenly he remembered that there was a third party in the room.

"What must she think of all this?" he whispered, audibly enough for me to hear him.

"Nothing I believe she is sound asleep and has not heard a word."

I looked up and smiled triumphantly, and Alice fully understood that I had been a witness to her "giving in" to Dick, a thing she would never allow she did, but she did not flash out as was her wont when vexed.

"Never mind; it is only Susan, after all, you know," she remarked indifferently, as though I had been a table or a chair; and resenting being treated as a nonenity, I rose up, and saying "good night," stalked out of the room with my head up in the air, but not before I heard my sister say, "She is such a good little thing, Dick; but what a pity she is so plain! She will never feel the happiness of being loved, as I do, Dick; and I am sure no one will ever care to marry poor Susan."

I went slowly up the stairs with Alice's words ringing in my ears, and dropped off to sleep with a heavy heart. And then I dreamed that I was Cinderella, and that a beautiful prince, in the disguise of our large tabby cat, had come to woo me.

Christmas day broke in wet and dreary but passed off quietly between morning and evening services and excellent fare; and on the following day Alice and I were up with the lark, and busy as bees in preparing for our guests. There were holly decorations with a sprig of mistletoe peeping out slyly here and there, and wonderful barley-sugar castles and pastry ramparts to erect. Our education in the domestic arts had not been neglected, and Alice's dainty hands were as skillful as my own in the concoction of savory dishes. By the time the evening shadows had fallen, and the only thing visible through the darkness was feathery snow-flakes hanging on to the garden rails and the leafless boughs, the parsonage was a blaze of light, and my sister and I, arrayed in our best attire, were ready to receive the company. Alice looked peerlessly lovely that night. She wore a black gauzy dress that floated around her in big dark waves, and showed up the purity and delicacy of her white neck and shoulders; and into her bright hair she had put some vivid scarlet berries, woven into a wreath with deep-hued glistening holly leaves. Her cheeks were flushed, and her lips were red like cherries. As for me, in a plain muslin, whose chief recommendation was its freshness, and with some pale snowdrops in my black hair, I presented a more comely appearance than usual; and after I had danced once or twice the color came into my face, and Dick told me that I was looking quite pretty. Young Mr. Craven, my father's new curate, seemed to think so too, for whenever I sat out I found him beside me, and conversing of books and music. The evening was a very pleasant one to me.

But about my sister Alice.

Late in the evening Mr. Farquhar arrived. My father had met him in town, and invited him; and in all the glory of irreproachable toilet, he walked into our modest room as though he felt himself to be the grandee of the party; and I hated him more, because somehow he seemed to throw both Dick and Mr. Craven into the shade with his airs and graces. Still it was hard to blame him for making my sister the object of undisguised attention; for, as I said before, her engagement to Dick Oswald was kept a secret, according to her expressed desire; but Alice was certainly to blame for accepting his devotion with sparkling eyes, proud to display even to the Marsfield people her potency over the other sex. Waltz after waltz, while Dick, ashy pale, and the picture of wretchedness, remained in a distant corner, Alice, with Mr. Farquhar's arm encircling her waist, and with her bold gaze upon her beautiful face, whirled past where he sat; but elated with her evident conquest, and lost in a love of admiration, my sister never as much as recollected the existence of her affianced husband until, as she was walking past me, I touched her hand and whispered "Dick."

"Oh, where on earth is he?" she whispered back; but just at that moment Arthur Farquhar spoke some compliment and diverted her attention, and I saw Dick leave the room and rush into the garden; and peeping out I watched him pacing up and down the walk, indifferent to the cold. Poor fellow, his heart beating fast kept him warm and circulated the blood in his veins.

At last the party was over, and Mr. Farquhar, the last to leave, said a lingering good-night to Alice, who, in spite of the weather, stood at the door. A pallid face out of the darkness witnessed the leave taking; and then, when my sister and I found ourselves alone, she at last thought of Dick.

"Where is Dick?" she asked in languid accents, but all the while she kept pulling on her gloves hurredly without being aware that a pair of eyes had never lost sight of her since her whispered adieu at the door.

"I am here!" said a hard voice, and what looked like a ghost of Dick Oswald rushed quickly into the room, and, seizing her hand, tore off the glove, revealing, in all its beauty and brilliance, the hateful diamond ring. Its luster danced before my gaze and sickened me. I loathed the cold, bright stone, for it reminded me of Arthur Farquhar's glance.

"Alice, what does this mean?" and Dick, frantic with suspision and jealousy, grasped her hand so hard that she cried out from sheer pain.

Defiant and angry at his violence, she lost all self-control.

"It means that Mr. Farquhar give me this ring, and that, until he replaces it by one plainer but more binding, this shall never leave my finger! I have borne with your jealousy and temper long enough, Mr. Oswald; and the dismissal you asked for the other day is granted, and I have the honor to wish you good-by!" And she dropped him a low courtesy with a mocking smile on her curved lips.

Dick dropped her hand and stared wildly at her with dilated eyes; then, without answering a word, he quietly picked up his hat, which he had thrown on the floor and walked out of the house.

There was a silence for some seconds, while we could hear his tread on the garden-walk that was crisp with snow. Then Alice snatched the ring off her finger and threw it with all her might to the farther end of the room, and, flinging herself into a chair, burst into a loud fit of hysterics that would have disturbed the neighborhood if we had not lived in rather an out-of-the-way spot. Fearing she would rouse up my father, whose health was far from robust, I threw a shawl over her and drew her into the garden, and the cold air calmed her a little and paled her flushed cheeks; but the gray dawn streaked the sky before she ceased her sobs and fell into an unquiet slumber. I dreaded the awakening, for I knew my sister's excitable temperament, and I pitied her for giving up real gold for mere dross. By the flickering light of a small lamp I saw her breast heaving with sorrow, even in her sleep, and her exquisite features all stained with tears; and as I unloosed my hair before the glass, and noticed my poor pale face, insignificant and unattractive, I was consoled for being so ugly by the thought that beauty did not always bring happiness in its train, and that my sister Alice, lying there a picture of perfect loveliness, was less to be envied than "poor plain Susan."

REMAINDER NEXT WEEK.

CONCERNING COLONELS.—To call a man "Colonel" is to convey the idea that he is of a mild, meek and benevolent disposition. It is also an evidence that he never was a soldier. For instance, we may recall some of the colonels of Philadelphia. There is Colonel Forney, Colonel McClure, Colonel McMichael, Colonel Scott, Colonel Mann, Colonel Fitzgerald, Colonel Philips, Colonel Green and Colonel Fitz. Of what regiment? And we might mention many more gentleman of high standing who have never been in the army, and can only be called "colonel" as a tribute to their antipathy to blood. If every colonel was a soldier, the standing army in Philadelphia would be a menance to our liberties. Their number is as great as it was in San Francisco, to which John Phœnix bears witness in the following story: The steamboat was leaving wharf, and everybody was taking leave of friends—all but Phœnix, who had no friends to bid him farewell. Ashamed of his loneliness, as the boat sheered off, he called out in a loud voice, "good-bye, Colonel," and, to his great delight, every man on the wharf took off his hat and shouted "Colonel, Good-bye!"—Philadelphia Post.

THE Boston Transcript gives the following account of a precocious merchant of that city: "Mr. Emmons Smith, a youth about fifteen years of age, is putting up a small store to cost about four hundred dollars, on the corner formerly occupied by the old Coose Hotel. He rents the ground and erects the building, which is to be occupied by him as a fancy goods and confectionery store, out of his own money earned in trade. He began business about three years ago with a barrel of apples, and his profits have now amounted to enough to build this store. He pays his tuition at school, which he attends regularly when in session; and clothes himself like any other independent man of business."

A BOSTON lecturer, recently, gave the following reasons why men don't marry. First, because they can't get the one they want; bachelors have high notions.—Second, because many of them are cowards, they dare not face the music; they dodge the question. Third, because they are skeptical; they think marriage a lottery. Fourth, they are selfish; they cannot yield for another's good; can't support a family; want the sweets of life without its burdens. Fifth, woman's extravagance. Here, the speaker showed true cause for man's hesitating. It costs as much to launch a woman on the sea of wedded life, as it would to fit out a small schooner. As to top sails, cordage, pennants, and streamers, the difference is in favor of the schooner.

—Alexander being asked why he did not gather money and lay it up in a public treasury, "For fear," said he "lest being keeper thereof, I should be infected and corrupted." A good caution for them who love to bear the bag.

—The poorest education that teaches one self-control is better than the best that neglects it.

MATILDA AT THE GATE.

Matilda, just you mind them hens,
And shoo 'em out away from here;
They're scratching all the garden up—
Why, Tiddy's gone—wa'al, wa'al that's queer.
She arn't contrary as a rule,
And gen'lly obeys my will;
But though she heard me, off she put—
Why, there's Lorenzo Pettingill!

He met her and she's stopped to talk—
Them hens will eat up everything—
He's wanting her to take a walk—
Wa'al, it is nice to walk in spring.
He's took her hand—come, that won't do—
She seems to stand uncommon still;
I'd better let them know I'm round—
Good evening, Mr. Pettingill!

He don't mind me—it ain't no use—
Ah, wa'al my time has been and gone;
But then, I'd really no idee
How Tiddy was a getting on.
These gals grow up, and pretty soon
They lay us old ones on the shelf.
Lorenzo is a smart young man—
I guess I'll tend them hens myself.

Going home With Sally.

One bright moonlight winter's night in the days of "lang syne," when schoolhouses, cheap schoolmasters and blue beach rods were the only instrumentalities used for teaching the "young idea how to shoot," we chanced to attend a "spelling school" in a certain rural district, the geographical location of which it is not necessary to mention. 'Twas there, however, where our eyes first fell on a "fairy form" that immediately set our susceptible heart in a blaze. She was sixteen or thereabout, with bright eyes, red cheeks and cherry lips, while the auburn ringlets clustered in a wealth of profusion around her beautiful head, and her person, to our ravished imagination, was more perfect in form and outline than the most faultless statue ever chiseled by the sculptor's art. As we gazed, our feelings, which never before had aspired girlward (we were scarcely eighteen), were fully aroused, and we determined to go home with her that night or perish in the attempt. As soon, therefore, as school was dismissed, and our "lady-love" suitably bonneted and cloaked, we approached to offer our services as contemplated, and we then learned an important lesson, viz: the difference between resolving and doing. As we neared her to put our resolution into execution, we seemed to be stricken with a sudden blindness; then red, green and yellowish lights flashed upon our vision, and appeared and disappeared like witches in a phantasmagoria. Our knees smote together like Belshazzar's, and our heart thumped with apparently as much force as if it were driving tenpenny nails into our ribs! We, in the meantime, having reached Sally's side, manage to mumble over something which is, perhaps, known to the Recording Angel, but surely is not to us, at the same time poking out our elbow as nearly at right angels with our breast as our physical contortion could possibly permit.

The first feelings over, what was our delight to find the object of our love clinging to our arm with all the tenacity a drowning man is said to clutch a straw. Talk of elysium, or sliding down greased rainbows, or feeding on flutes, what are such "pheelings" in comparison with those mighty ones that swelled our bosom nigh unto bursting off our waistcoat buttons! Our happiness was simply ecstatic, and every young lady or gentleman who has ever felt the mighty throbbings of a newly pledged love, will completely understand that common word.

Well, we walked on pleasantly towards Sally's home, conversing very cosily and sweetly as we passed along, until so courageous did we become that we actually proposed "to go and sit awhile," to which our dulcinea very graciously assented.—Alas for us! how soon were to be reminded the "course of true love never did run smooth."

Sally had a brother of some ten summers, who accompanied us along the way, and who was in wonderful high spirits at the idea of his sister's having a beau, and he would circle around us, every now and then giggling in the height of his glee, and examining us as closely as if Sally and ourself were the world-renowned Siamese twins, and he was taking his first look. Bill, by the way, was a snubbed, chuckle-headed boy, whose habiliments would have made the fortune of an ordinary dealer in mop-rags.

At length we arrived at the bars, and while we were letting them down, Bill shot past us, and tore for the house, as if pursued by a thousand bulls of Bashan. He flung open the door with a bang, and shouted at the top of his voice:

"Mother! mother! Jim Clark is comin' hum with Sal!"

"Is he?" screamed the old woman in reply. "Wal, I declare! I didn't think the saphead knew enough!"

Reader, we didn't go in.

AN amusing colloquy came off at a supper table on board of one of our Mississippi steamboats, between a Chicago exquisite, reeking with oil and cologne, who was cursing the waiters, assuming very consequential airs, and a raw Jonathan seated by his side, dressed in homespun. Turning to his vulgar friend, the former pointed with his jewelled finger and said; "Buttah, sah!" "Yes, I see it is," coolly replied Jonathan. "Buttah, sah, I say," fiercely repeated the dandy. "Yes, sir; I know it—very good and a

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL,

NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE

Throat & Lungs.

It is gratifying to us to inform the public that Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, for Throat and Lung Diseases, has gained an enviable reputation from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and from thence to some of the first families of Europe, not through the press alone, but by persons throughout the States actually benefitted and cured at his office. While he publishes less, so say our reporters, he is unable to supply the demand. It gains and holds its reputation—

First. Not by stopping cough, but by loosening and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter collected about the throat and bronchial tubes, which causes irritation.

Second. It removes the cause of irritation (which produces cough) of the mucous membrane and bronchial tubes, assists the lungs to act and throw of the unhealthy secretions, and purifies the blood.

Third. It is free from squills, lobelia, ipicac and opium, of which most throat and lung remedies are composed, which allay cough only, and disorganize the stomach. It has a soothing effect on the stomach, acts on the liver and kidneys and lymphatic and nervous regions, thus reaching to every part of the system, and in its invigorating and purifying effects it has gained a reputation which it must hold above all others in the market.

NOTICE.

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or not—is responsible for the pay.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it is taken from the office or not.

AN EXCELLENT PEN.—We have been favored with a sample card of the celebrated Spencerian Steel Pens, and after trying them thoroughly are convinced of their superior merit. These pens are comprised in fifteen numbers, each differing in flexibility and fineness of point, so that the most fastidious penman cannot fail to find among the fifteen just such a pen as suits him. The Spencerian Pens are famous for their elacticity of movement, smoothness of point and great durability, and are a nearer approximation to the real Swan Quill Pen than anything hitherto made. They are manufactured in England under the supervision of the original inventor of Steel Pens, the venerable Josiah Mason, and Joseph Gillott—the latter making a few of the number after the models of the late P. R. Spencer, the famous penman. They are used very largely in the common schools in the United States, in all the principal commercial colleges, in the government offices at Washington, and in the banks and in the commercial offices throughout the country, the sale reaching an enormous quantity annually. For the convenience of those who may wish to try them, a sample card of the Spencerian Pens may be had by mail by enclosing 25 cents to Messrs. Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co., 138 and 140 Grand street, N. Y., or the pens may be bought at almost any store where pens are sold.

PROSPECTUS OF THE REPUBLIC.

Believing that the inestimable privileges of self government guaranteed by the Federal Constitution involve corresponding duties, and that among these are sleepless vigilance and the devotion of the best thoughts and efforts of the citizen in aid of the preservation and development of our country and its institutions, we have determined, in furtherance of these objects, to establish a monthly magazine devoted to the discussion of the science of government and to a review of political events.

Assuming that the legitimate object of good government is provision for the welfare and happiness of the citizen, his physical comfort, educational growth, and moral development, THE REPUBLIC will bring to this test all economic questions, political action, and governmental measures.

Holding firmly that in a republic, constituted as ours is, political parties are essential, and that they furnish the best, not to say the only means of that constant and severe scrutiny to which power should be always subjected, THE REPUBLIC will insist that the country is not only safe, but safest with its destiny in the keeping of the Republican party; that measures of reform and progress must be carried forward through its instrumentality, and that its permanent ascendancy should be maintained so long as it responds to the demands of enlightened and progressive public opinion.

THE REPUBLIC will avoid unwarranted censure of opponents as well as indiscriminate praise of friends—aiming at that degree of independence and candor which concede justice to both. It will not waste words, influence, or power by purely negative criticisms, but will endeavor to promote correct action by affirmatively and plainly showing the better way. True, this line of criticism involves thought, care, investigation—with the exercise of an impartial judgment; but history has conclusively demonstrated that by these means the cause of truth and good government can be best advanced.

THE REPUBLIC will furnish a brief and accurate record of events of political and general interest, as—

The proceedings of Congress.
The decisions and action of the Executive Departments.
The action of States and of political bodies of national import.
The progress of material and educational development.
Decisions of the judiciary of political or financial importance and of general application.

The publication being monthly, the record will be made up after the events have transpired, and will make, at the close of the year, a volume of accurate and valuable information in convenient form for preservation and reference.

Among the topics claiming discussion will be—

The relative power and jurisdiction of the Federal and State Governments; the expansion of territory, revenue, finance, education, industrial schools, postal telegraph, postal savings banks, railway and canal transportation, life and fire insurance, river and harbor improvements, the public health, reforms in the public service, and the establishment of equal civil and political rights. On these and kindred subjects THE REPUBLIC will aim to convey reliable information, excite thought, and induce action.

The writers for THE REPUBLIC have been selected from among those whose sagacity, judgment, and energy were thoroughly tested in the recent political contest; and their names are withheld now, as then, for the sole reason that they prefer success through reason, argument, and the merit of their productions.

Moved by these considerations, and subordinating the question of remuneration entirely, we appeal with confidence to those who, during the recent campaign, responded so liberally in money, time, and effort, to aid in the introduction of THE REPUBLIC The Magazine will be furnished at as near cost price as practicable, and will be enlarged whenever the patronage received will justify increased expenditure.

THE REPUBLIC wild be published monthly, on superior paper, in clear type, and will contain not less than forty-eight pages of reading matter, exclusive of advertisements.

FOSTER TO BE EXECUTED.

NEW YORK, March 15.

The private Secretary of Governor Dix appeared at the Sheriff's office yesterday afternoon with a letter addressed to the Rev. Dr. Tyng, sr., stating that the prisoner had better prepare himself for death, as justice and the public safety demanded his execution. The Sheriff received also a notice that an official notification to that effect would reach him to-morrow.

This news ran from lip to lip like wild fire, and before it had been an hour old, probably three or four thousand persons were aware of it. The evening papers rushed out extras with the brief and fatal announcement, and it was the all absorbing topic of the evening. This clearly shows the extent to which the public mind is excited upon the subject; for in hotels and club roons, in resturants and in lunch dines, the word "Foster" could be heard in almost every circle of conversation, and on the salutation of greeting between friends on the streets.

The general expression of opinion was sympathy for Foster, with the belief that his death is a public necessity, in order to make street ruffianism as dangerous to ruffians as it is to decent citizens.

AMERICA THE "OLD WORLD."

What next are we to look for in the way of a surprise? It is now stated that recent discoveries are tending to show that America, and not Europe or Asia, is the Old World, geologically speaking, and will porbably be proved to be the birth-place of the earliest man. Ancient sites of an unknown race, different entirely from the mound builders and the present Indians, have been discovered along Cow creek, in Colorado. These ancient sites are found with shells and fossils in a desposit as old as the Pliocene, and perhaps Miocene, and are on ridges and bluffs which were near some ancient fresh water lakes. The discoveries are in the form of fire places, rude stone monuments and implements of stone. They were brought to light by Mr. E. L. Berthold, who has presented the subject in full with a map in the "Proceedings of the Philadelphia Academy of Science for 1872."—Telegraph.

Defeat of the Education Bill.

Exciting Scene in Parliament.

Probable resignation of the Ministry.

DEFEAT OF THE IRISH UNIVERSITY BILL.

LONDON, March 12.—The scene in the House of Commons last night when the defeat of the ministry on the Irish University Bill was anounced is indescribable. The excitement in the gallaries and on the floor was intense, while the opponents of the measure indulged in tumultuous cheering over its rejection. Among the distinguished personages in the stranger's gallery, which was crowded during the debate, where their Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Princess Louise, and Prince Christian. The Scotch and Welsh members supported the bill. The Catholics were unanimous in their opposition to it. After the announcement of the result Mr. Gladstone arose and said: The vote just made is certainly of a grave character. As the House never wishes to continue its deliberations when the existence of the government is in doubt I move an adjournment until Thursday. The motion was carried. In consequence of the late hour at which the result was reached the additional comments of the London morning journals are megre and restrained. The Advertiser and Standard are jubilant over the rejection of the bill. The Advertiser says it cannot imagine that even Mr. Gladstone will stoop to remain in office after such a defeat. The Telegraph considers the resignation of the Ministry as an exceedingly probable event, while the Times doubts that the Cabinet will take such a course.

GLADSTONE'S INTERVIEW WITH THE QUEEN.

The Globe, in its issue this afternoon, says that Mr. Gladstone's audience with with the Queen at Buckingham Palace, lasted half an hour. The result is not yet known in London.

THE IRISH UNIVERSITY BILL.

The Irish University Bill did not receive the vote of a single conservative member of the House of Commons. Forty-seven Liberals, of whom thirty-six were Irishmen, voted against the bill. Fifteen Irish members voted for it. Seventeen members of the House, including Dr. Isaac Bull, member for Limerick, were absent. Forty members participated in the debate. The Right Honerable John Bright, Jocob Bright, his brother, the the Marquis of Lorne, supported the Government.

THE SPANISH ASSEMBLY.

MADRID, March 12.—The Assembly yesterday definitely sactioned the bill introduced by the government, suspending the sittings and convoking a constituent Cortes, on the first of May. Senor Martos, President of the Assembly, and Senor Lopez, the Secretary, have resigned. Senor Martoz, in tendering his resignation, made the statement that the act was caused solely by ill health. Debate on the Porto Rico Abolition Bill has been resumed in the Assembly.

ANOTHER GOVERNMENT DEFEAT.

It is reported in this city that a sharp engagement took place yesterday between the government forces under General Nouvelles, and a large body of Carlists. General Nouvelles was defeated and compelled to retreat upon Pampelina, with severe loss.

VINEGAR BITTERS

VEGETABLE — FREE FROM ALCOHOL — PURELY — CALIFORNIA — DEHAETAKER'S — VINEGAR BITTERS

Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the Great Blood Purifier and a Life-giving Principle, a Perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain longun well, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist: There is scarcely an individual on the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Typesetters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS twice a week.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the Blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubercular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is effected.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

The Aperient and mild Laxative properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are the best safe-guard in cases of eruptions and malignant fevers, their balsamic, healing, and soothing properties protect the humors of the fauces. Their Sedative properties allay pain in the nervous system, stomach, and bowels, either from inflammation, wind, colic, cramps, etc.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Directions.—Take of the Bitters on going to bed at night from a half to one and one-half wine-glassfull. Eat good nourishing food, such as beef-steak, mutton chop, venison, roast beef, and vegetables, and take out-door exercise. They are composed of purely vegetable ingredients, and contain no spirit.

MATTIE'S WANTS AND WISHES

I want a piece of cal'co
To make my doll a dress;
I doesn't want a big piece,
A yard'll do, I guess.
I wish you'd fred my needle,
And find my fimble, too—
I has such heaps a-sewing,
I don't know what to do.

My Hepsy tored her aporn
A tum'lin down the stair,
And Cæsar's lost his pantoons
And needs anozzer pair.
I wants my Maud a bonnet,
She hasn't none at all.
And Fred must have a jacket,
His ozzer one's too small.

I wants to go to grand'ma's,
You promised as I might;
I know she'd like to see me,
I wants to go to-night.
She lets me wipe the dishes,
And see in grandpa's watch—
I wish I'd free, four pennies
To buy some butter-scotch.

I want some newer mittens—
I wish you'd knit me some,
Cause most my fingers freezes
They leak so in the fum.
I wore'd 'em out last summer,
A pullin' George's sled;
I wish you wouldn't laugh so—
It hurts me in my head.

I wish I had a cookie,
I'm hungry's I can be,
If you hasn't pretty large ones
You'd better bring me free.
I wish I had a p'ano—
Won't you buy me one to keep!
O dear! I feel so tired,
I wants to go to sleep.

AIR CASTLES

Built by Six Little People.

"I mean to have a black silk dress, and pink roses in my bonnet, and a white muslin long-shawl," said Cecy; "and I mean to look exactly like Minerva Clark! I shall be very good, too; as good as Mrs Bedell, only a great deal prettier. All the young gentlemen will want me to go and ride, but I shan't notice them at all, because you know I shall always be teaching in Sunday school and visiting the poor. And some day when I am bending over an old woman and feeding her with jelly a poet will come along and see me, and he'll go home and write a poem about me," concluded Cecy, triumphantly.

"Pooh!" said Clover. "I don't think that would be nice at all. I'm going to be a beautiful lady—the most beautiful lady—the most beautiful lady in the world! And I'm going to live in a yellow castle, with yellow pillars to the portico, and a square thing on top, like Mr. Sawyer's. My children are going to have a play-house up there. There's going to be a spy-glass in the window, to look out of. I shall wear gold dresses and silver dresses every day, and diamond rings, and have white satin aprons to tie on when I'm dusting, or doing anything dirty. In the middle of my back-yard, there will be a pond-full of Lubin's extracts, and whenever I want any I shall just go out and dip a bottie in. And I shan't teach in Sunday schools, like Cecy, because I don't want to; but every Sunday I shall go and stand by the gate, and when her scholars go by on their way home, I'll put Lubin's extract on their handkerchiefs."

"I mean to have just the same," cried Elsie, whose imagination was fired by this gorgeous vision, "only my pound will be the biggest. I shall be a great deal beautifuller, too," she added. "You can't," said Katy from overhead, "Clover is going to be the most beautiful lady in the world."

"But I'll be more beautiful," cried poor little Elsie; and I'll be big, too, and everybody'll be kind, then, and never run away and hide; and there won't be any post-offices, or anything disagreeable."

"What'll you be, Jonnie?" asked Clover, anxious to change the subject, for Elsie's voice was growing plantive. But Jonnie had no ideas to her future. She laughed a great deal, and squeezed Dorry's arm very tight, but that was all. Dorry was more explicit.

"I mean to have turkey every day," he declared, "and batter puddings; not boiled ones, you know, but little baked ones with brown shiny tops, and a great deal of pudding sauce to eat on them. And I shall be so big then that nobody will say, "Three helps is quite enough for a ltttle boy."

"Oh, Dorry you pig!" cried Katy, while the rest screamed with laughter. Dorry was quite affronted. Peace-making Clover soothed him, and called on Katy, in her turn, to tell what she would do.

"I'm not sure about what I'll be," replied Katy; "beautiful of course, and good if I can, only not so good as you, Cecy, because it would be nice to go and ride with the young gentlemen sometimes. And I'd like to have a large house and a splendiferous garden, and then you could all come and live with me, and we would play in the garden, and dorry should have turkey five times a day if he liked. And we'd have a machine to darn the stockings, and another machine to put the bureau drawers in order and we'd never sew or kint garters, or do anything we did'nt want to. But now I'll tell you what I mean to do."

"Isn't it the same thing?" asked Cecy.

"Oh, no!" replied Katy, "quite different; for you see I mean to do something, I don't know what, yet, but when I'm grown up I shall find out." (Poor Katy always said when I'm grown up," forgetting how much she had grown already.) "Perhaps," she went on, 'i will be rowing out in boats, and saving people's lives, like that girl in the book. Or perhaps I shall go and nurse in the hospital, like Miss Nightingale. Or else I'll head a crusade, and ride on a white horse, with armor and a helmet on my head, and carry a sacred flag. Or, if I don't do that I'll paint pictures, or sing, or scalp—sculp—what is it? you know—makes figures in marble. Anyhow it shall be something And when Aunt Izzie sees it, and reads about me in the newspapers, she will say: The dear child! I always knew she would turn out an ornament to the family. People very often say, afterward, that 'they always knew.'"—"What Katy Did," by Susan Coolidge.

LUCK AND LABOR.—Last week two boys left their country homes to seek their fortunes in the city.

"I shall see what luck will do for me," said one.

"I shall see what labor will do for me," said the other.

Which is the better to depend upon luck or labor? Let me see.

Luck is always waiting for something to turn up.

Labor will turn up something.

Labor jumps up at six o'clock, and with busy pen or ringing hammer, lays the foundation of a competence

Luck whines.

Labor whistles.

Luck relies on chances.

Labor on character.

Luck slides upward to independence.

Which is likely to do most for you, boys?

How to Plant Apple Trees.

It is astonishing how much diversity of opinion there is and has been about the distance apart to plant apple trees. After an experience of fifteen years, I would not plant trees less than 24 feet apart, from that to thirty-two feet. Apple trees planted sixteen feet apart, when they get large enough to bear, are found by experience to be entirely too near each other, the limbs inter-lock, and it is difficult to get through the orchard with a wagon, and the want of light and room causes the leaves to fall from the lower limbs and the other trees become unhealthy.

Young orchards should be cultivated like a corn field until the trees begin to bear, and there is no better crop to grow among young trees than corn. Let the row of trees have the ground of the row to themselves and the row of trees the same as a row of corn, but let it stand, as it forms a protection to the trees in winter. After the apples begin to bear, seed the ground to clover, clean, no blue-grass or timothy mixed with it, and don't take the clover off for hay, either turn in the hogs or cut the clover and let it rot under the trees, and whenever the clover gets crowded out by blue grass or timothy, plow it up and seed down with clover again.

Orange Trees.

Small orange trees are very beautiful for window gardens, on account of their lovely and fragrant flowers and their deep evergreen foliage, which contrasts so perfectly with the snowy flowers, their golden stamens and anthers.

The prettiest kinds for house culture are the Dwarf Mandarin or China orange which bears very nice fruit, and the dwarf Otaheite, which is a more common kind, but neither its flowers nor its fruit are as fine as the Mandarin. Fifty years ago orange trees were the most fashionable of all kinds of house plants, and no lover of plants was without one or more specimens of finely shaped, healthy trees, which made beautiful ornaments for the dining room in winter, and the piazza or lawn in Summer.

This fashion has in a measure passed away, yet the old trees flourish and are carefully treasured in many an ancient household while the odorous flowers are always required to adorn the maiden for her bridal, and childhood, youth or old age when clasped in the embrace of death. There are few plants in the florist's catalogue, which combine so much that is lovely in flower, fruit and foliage.

Oranges are usually propagated from seeds, and when one or two years old are grafted with a cion from a fruitful variety. The seeds sprout very easily in any light sandy loam, but the plant requires good rich soil in which to grow and blossom in perfection; and if liquid manure is given in a copious dose, at least once a week, the plant will become much more fully developed in luxuriant foliage and flower; and if the pot or tub is placed a little aside from the hottest noon-day sun in the summer time, its leaves will be far handsomer.

BUYING POULTRY.

I send the following which I observed for some years in purchasing poultry, and which may be use to some of your readers who may not be familiar with the age of poultry. Few housekeepers, and fewer cooks, are as good judges of the age of poultry as they ought to be. We all know when poultry comes upon the table, whether it is tender or tough; and there should be no difficulty of knowing just as certainly, whether a chicken, duck, goose or turkey is old or young when it is offered for sale. Now the following is offered as a rule by which poultry can be safely judged, which if read over for a few times, and then laid away for ready reference when needed, no person need purchase old, tough poultry unless from choice.

If a hen's spur is hard, and the scales on the legs rough, she is old, wether you see her head or not, but the head will corroborate your observation. If the under bill is so stiff that you cannot bend it down, and the comb thick and rough, leave her, no matter how fat and plump, for some one less particular. A young hen has only the rudiments of spurs; the scales on the legs are smooth, gloosy and fresh colored, whatever the color may be; the claws tender and short, the nails sharp, the under bill soft, and the comb thin and smooth.

An old hen turkey has rough scales on the legs, callosities on the soles of the feet, and long strong claws; a young one is the reverse of all these marks. When the feathers are on the old turkey-cock has a long tuft or beard, a young one but a sprouting one; and when they are off, the smooth scales on the legs decide the point, beside the difference in size of the wattles of the neck and in the elastic shoot upon the nose.

An old goose when alive is known by the rough legs, the strength of the wings, particularly at the pinions, the thickness and strength of the bill, and the fineness of the feathers; and when plucked, by the legs, the tenderness of the skin under the wings, by the pinions and the bill and the coarseness of the skin.

Ducks are distinguished by the same means, but there is the difference—that a duckling's bill is much larger in proportion to the breadth of its head than the old duck. A young pigeon is discovered by its pale colors, smooth scales, tender, collapsed feet, and the yellow long down interspersed among its feathers. A pigeon that can fly has always red-colored legs and no down, and is then too old for use.—Germantown Telegraph.

Keep the Cattle Growing.

The most successful breeders of cattle, sheep or swine, know from experience that although they may possess the best breeding animals they will not be successful in producing superior stock if a continual growth of young animals is not keep up. In order to begin in time at this indispensible preparation for success, the brood mares, cows, ewes and sows are most carefully and suitably fed while young, and as soon as the young animals make their apperance, they are taken the greatest care of, the dams being suitably fed while suckling, and when the young ones are weaned they are not supposed to want for food or drink a single hour. By this means a continuous or rapid growth is kept up, and the animals attain a large size and heavy weight at an early age. When breeding animals are not properly fed and comfortably sheltered in winter, the bad effect of such treatment is not confined to their own want of condition—it is shared by their progeny, and cannot be remedied.—When young stock are not fed well and comfortably housed in winter, their growth becomes stunted and no subsequent amount of good treatment can repair the damage. Young animals may suffer for the want of proper provender in summer and autumn, as well as in winter, and when this happens it stops continuous growth and prevents ultimate success in the objects of the breeders.—Farm Journal.

Thinking Farmers.

If farmers donot make their calling honorable, they have only themselves to blame. They are always called by politicians the "bone and sinew of the land," and if they neglect the cultivation of their mind they will never be anything but bone and sinew. Bone is good, but brains are better. Muscle is necessary, but mind must direct.

The poor and ignorant may be just as good as the rich and wise, because moral worth is one thing and intellectual worth another; but it is a fact that those men ever have been and ever will be most respected, who with equal morals, make the best use of their heads. Lawyers and merchants only succeed in the world by the most diligent study, and farmers can only really succeed in like manner.

A man may, in rare cases, be an excellent farmer, and yet be unable to read, but he is always a thinker. His neighbors read and he hears them talk. They gather ideas from books and papers and apply them, and he watches the results. In his own operations, every good farmer watches careful.y to discover the reasons for success or the causes of failure.

Vast good has resulted in our own country from farmers' clubs, where the experience of a neighborhood is talked over. To be useful they must be practical. It is not a lyceum for rhetorical culture—although confidence and ability on public speaking are among the important incidental results—but the object should be to compare facts and experience. If a man has raised a good crop let him tell his neighbors, in a little friendly gathering, what kind of seed was used and when and in what manner planted; if a failure has occurred, state fully the circumstances, and your neighbors may tell you wherein you failed. Even if no valuable information is directly elicited at a meeting hints are often given and trains of thought are started that result in greater good.

Farmers, depend upon it, you too much neglect your business, and no not sufficiently honor it by the active employment of your heads as well as your hands You may rise early and work late, but for the lack of forethought, take many a false step and miss a good crop. No merchant can succeed by such neglect as is common among farmers. It is not that farmers know less, but are not as alert and active to all improvement and progress. If they would think more about their business, success would oftener crown their efforts and greater honor redound to their occupation.—Vermont Watchman.

MARYLAND.

REPUBLICAN VICTORY.

CAMBRIDGE, Md., March 10.

For the first time in the history of Cambridge the Republicans on Saturday elected their candidates for town commissioners, Wm. F. Pattison and Clement T. Mowbray, the former by twenty-one, and the latter by fifteen majority.—The Democrats ran Chas. W. Breerwood and Wm. Drain, two very worthy and popular men, and their friends were considerably disappointed at the result, as they were confident of success.

WEST VIRGINIA.

SINGULAR DEATHS—SERIES OF ACCIDENTS.

PARKERSBURG, March 11.

A very singular series of accidents occurred last Saturday night at Elizabeth, West Virginia, a few miles from here. Shortly after Mr. Alf. Wells and his family had retired, Mrs. Wells complained of feeling a numbness in her limbs and requested her husband to help her walk across the room. About half way across the room he expressed some fears, when she told him not to be afraid, and immediately dropped dead at his feet.

He gave an alarm, and a neighbor, an old lady, in crossing the street to his assistance, fell, breaking her left arm in two places and her right collar bone.—Her son, a young man, heard her scream, and rushing out of the house to her aid, fell against the half open door, breaking his nose and rebounding senseless to the floor. Doctor Kendall, hastening to the help of the sufferers, also fell, broke two of his ribs, and had to be carried home. This reads like a joke. It is seriously true.

CHICAGO.

A FREE FIGHT.

CHICAGO, March 6.—A desperate and bloody encounter took place in the south-eastern part of this city last night between two policeman and a crowd of roughs returning from a party. One of the policemen attempted to arrest one of the gang, when the rest stopped him and beat him so that he was left insensible and his recovery is doubtful. Another policeman coming to the rescue fired several shots into the gang, one of which took effect, wounding two brothers so that both will probably die. The rest of the party fled, but a number of them were arrested and held for a hearing without bail.

THE subject of education is the one nearest the heart of every parent in the State, and rightly, too. As a matter of interest to every reader, we give the report of the Committee on Education in the Constitutional Convention:

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall provide for the maintenance and support of a thorough and efficient system of public schools, wherein all the children of this Commonwealth, above the age of six years, may be educated.

SEC. 2. They shall appropriate at least one million of dollars for each year, to be annually distributed among the several school districts, according to law, and applied to public school purposes only.

SEC. 3. No money raised in any way whatever for the support of public schools shall ever be appropriated to, or used by, any religious sect for the maintenance or support of schools exclusively under its own control.

SEC. 4. A Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be appointed by the Governor, by and with the consent of the Senate. He shall hold his office for the term of four years, and his duties and compensation shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 5. Neither the Legislature nor any county, city, borough, school district, or other public or municipal corporation shall ever make any appropriation, grant or donation of land, money or property of any kind to any church or religious society, or to any university, college, seminary, academy or school, or any literary, scientific or charitable institution, or society controlled or managed by any church or sectarian denomination.

SEC. 6. The arts and sciences may be encouraged and promoted in college and other institutions of learning, under the exclusive control of the State.

SEC. 7. The Legislature may establish industrial schools, and require the attendance therein of vagrant and neglected and abandoned children.

SEC. 8. They may, by law, require that every child of sufficient mental and physical ability shall attend the public schools, unless educated by other means.

THE EXISTANCE OF GOD.

BY T. H. STOCKTON, D. D.

We need not soar above the skies,
Leave the sun and stars below,
And seek Thee with unclouded eyes,
In all that angels know:
The very breath we here inhale,
The pulse in every heart,
Attest with force that cannot fail
Thou art, O God! Thou art!

If 'midst the ever-during songs
Of universal joy,
The chime of worlds and chant of tongues
The praise that we employ,
May breathe its music in Thine ear,
Its meaning in Thy heart,
Our glad confession deign to hear,
Thou art, O God! Thou art!

SUNDAY READINGS.—No. 6.

"Lead us not into temptation."

The wisest and strongest need to utter this prayer, for who can say when wisdom and strength may fail to keep the feet from the perilous paths, whose end is spiritual death.

Is it that we are led into temptation, that the temper of our supposed virtue may be tried by the ordeal, and proved to be real or supposed as the event proves? If so, none need wish for opportunity, since that ever waits at our door. Not an hour passes, that does not bring a conflict between right and wrong in the human soul.

Truth often causes a conflict, that taxes all the forces within, since its expression at times costs very dearly. It may alienate life-long friends or repel luke-warm ones; it may enkindle flames in hostile bosoms, that no after service can quench; still, the imperative obligation rests on all to utter, if utterance be due, only the truth, simply and kindly as may be, but always and everywhere the truth.

It has been said, that there is no better test of a person's character, than his management in money transactions and his probity in fulfilling monetary obligations; and this is perhaps true, since strict honor in these proves that temptation has no power, in a wide-spread sense, over a very potent incentive to do evil. The man who can hold in his possession the property of others, labor for its increase and rejoice in its success, without wish to avail himself sinfully of any advantage chance throws in his way, or having that wish says, "get thee behind me Satan" cannot, it would seem, be far from the faithful performance of each other duty, cannot be far from the pure and longed-for kingdom of God.

"It is the first step that costs," it has been truly said, and, before taking this important step, if men would but pause and consider where the path ends, vice would be rare in our midst. It is so much easier to refrain than to turn back, that the simple wisdom of doing so must commend itself to any who will pause and think. The tempting glass is displayed, others are sipping the fatal draught, but if the thought is permitted, "it is the first step in a fatal course," strength may come to put the fiend aside, even in the face of mockery and taunt.

The same may be said of every other vice, and the same argument hold good. A wonderful manliness takes possession of the heart, that has thus asserted its power over temptation to wrong doing. It is as if a closer bond had been drawn, between the Infinite and the finite soul, and the unseen world draws nearer, and the glorious possibilities of the future more real.

Lead us not into temptation, or if suffered to experience its fascinations, keep us from falling into its fatal snares! Such should be the prayer of all, added to a watchfulness that never sleeps. Such effort is its own reward, as none need be told who have experienced the inward peace which follows each meant endeavor, and have heard the approving voice of those angels of God, implanted and indwelling in each immortal soul.

Lead us not into temptation! Since so many fall whose feet were apparently planted on the rock of integrity, who can be certain of standing? Therefore let each arm for the conflict that may be near at hand, in a guise little dreamed of, in a strength rarely suspected.

It is surprising how vice or sin in any shape becomes wholly or partially disarmed, by successful opposition to its first advances. It loses its vaunted power and becomes "as the idle wind that men regard not."

To keep the soul unspotted, to strengthen each good impulse and repress each bad one, to cultivate each nobler and worthy aspiration, and discourage each low and unworthy one, is the real business of life to which all else must bend. God has filled each sphere with countless occasions for doing His work and our own. It is ours to so improve them, that spiritual growth in all good shall meet and receive His divine approbation.

See advertisement in another column.

——This week we paid another visit to the public schools. The four higher grades are on the first floor, and the departments are the High School, senior and junior grammar schools and the first intermediate grade. We were just in time for the opening exercises which were quite interesting. After the students had been seated and a signal given, the glass partition, separating the high school from the senior grammar, was thrown up and the pupils all filed into these two rooms. After the usual devotional exercises, several hymns were sung by these two hundred boys and girls under direction of the music teacher who presided at the organ. They do sing very well. Most of them can read the notes readily and, although the time might be improved somewhat, the degree of proficiency they have attained is quite creditable.

The order was very good and it was something of a pleasure to see so many young folks, looking so neat and trim, engaging in such pleasant and healthful exercise. The intermediate grade and junior grammar school, taught by Miss Jennie Morrison and Miss Beckie McGinley, resemble each other as much, almost, as twin sister. The scholars are nearly all of the same size, are studying the same text books and only seem to differ in grade of advancement, the junior grammar school being considerably ahead of the other. We listened to several resitations in both grades and were pleased with the good order and attention of the pubils as well as the graceful and thorough drills of the teachers.

The pupils in the senior grammar school, taught by Mr. W. S. McPheron, are there fully prepared for entering the high school. Here the boys and girls have arrived at that uncertain age when much care and patience are required of the teacher, and the teacher appeared to possess all the needed qualifications.

The lessons recited in our presence were made interesting and effective by his skillful management and pleasant manner.

The high school numbers thirty students, the sexes being about equally represented. A course of study is persued here which, if completed, will prepare the student for taking a collegiate course or for entering upon almost any business pursuit. It is certainly an advantage to have provided in a free school a course of instruction like this, equal to that of our Seminaries and Academies, and we are looking forward to the time when every township will have its high school, so that all who desire it may receive a higher grade of education at the expense of the State. The high school is an institution required in the districts of most of the eastern states and is universally regarded as a most valuable addition to the old common school system.

We were well repaid for our visit to these schools and left there with the impression that "down east" is not the only place where free schools are properly managed.

——Many of our readers will remember Dr. Fred Barrett who used to practice medicine in this place. He has turned up in the Mississippi Legislature and a leading journal called the Pilot, printed at the state capitol, speaks of him as follows:

"Another prominent member of the House is

HON. FRED. BARRETT.

Mr. B. is a native of Pennsylvania, son of Jesse Barrett, who was Judge of the 22d Judicial District of Pennsylvania, and is about thirty years of age.

He was, in his boyhood days, an apprentice in the printing office of the Clearfield Republican. In 1861, at the call of the President for troops, he left the medical college, at which he was a student, and enlisted in the army, but was discharged in 1863 on account of physical disabilities. He returned to college after his discharge and graduated in 1866 in the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia.

He came to this State 1869, and has, ever since taken an active part in the affairs of the Republican party. In 1870 he was enrolling clerk in the Legislature and in 1871 he was elected as a floating Representative from Amite and Lincoln counties.

In appearance, Mr. Barrett is a man of thick features, with his face trimmed with sandy whiskers which look as though a little compost would do them no harm. He is tall, well built, and has a literary caste about him. He is Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations; and is one of the most ze alous members of the House.

——Two men tried to suffocate themselves in this place last week. Neither succeeded but the efforts of both were commendable. One man blowed out the gas in his room at the Brockerhoff House and went to bed; but he could not sleep well and had a dream about swallowing a stone pile and fighting a swarm of yellow-jackets that had hived in his hair. He was awakened by some one who was passing by and smelling the gas, came to his relief. The other traveled individual blowed out the patent gas in the Bush House and slept soundly till morning. He said he had a bad cold and didn't notice anything wrong, but Wilkinson says his gas won't suffocate any body. As these two travelers grow wiser they will probably become older.

——Whew! but it was windy last Saturday night and Sunday. Sourbeck's bill-board and Guggenheimer's show windows suffered several compound fractures.

——The game of marbles is budding and blossoming.

——About these times look out for the usual equinoctial storm.

——Corks will keep a horse on his feet, but they treacherously come back on a man.

——Take her up tenderly; lift her with care; none know how dearly she paid for her hair.

——Farmers say the grain is in splendid condition under the snow—in fact, growing rather too fast, some think.

——What is the difference between a stranger and regular boarder at the Bush House? We don't like two eggs-actly say.

——A Phila. bird can whistle yankee-doodle. A number of Bellefonte birds can do the same thing—through the bars of the County jail.

——If our young ladies wish to preserve their beauty, we would caution them to wear shakers and sundowns. It is the March winds that play havoc with complexions of the dear creatures.

——By a unanimous vote the City of Altoona has been selected as the place for the next meeting of the Central Pa., Conference of the M. E. Church. Altoona is a hospitable place and poultry flourishes there, and of course the appointment is a good one.

——"The White House where the president resides, is pleasantly located on Penna. avenue," says a Washington correspondent of an exchange. What a startling and truthful statement! The writer who made a free will offering of such valuable information should have a leather medal.

——The pleasant face of that staunch republican, Captain James Dunlap of Pine Grove, brightened our sanctum on last Thursday. He reports that there is not nearly so much fever in Pine Grove as was at first reported. The few remaining cases are recovering and that thriving little town is as healthy and thrifty as ever. Call again, Captain.

——Those gentlemen, those irrrepressible and active young men, who believe in a good thing and work it up as they only can, we mean the firm of Palmer and Wooster, are selling the Improved Elias Howe Sewing machines very rapidly.

They sell a tip top machine on reasonable terms, and you ought to get one from them if you need it.

——J. M. Wagner & Co., dealers in all kinds of grain, flour, feed, &c., have been doing a very heavy trade lately. We noticed some dozen or more teams waiting for their turn to unload, the other day.

Mr. Cal. Garberick, superintendent of the Mill, is a thoroughly competent, energetic and honest gentleman and richly deserves his success in the grain business.

——The following extract is from a poem written by one of nature's sweetest warblers—America's noblest bard. For beauty of language, facility in execution, and grandeur of subject, it is unexcelled. Read, reflect, and revolve in your mind:

"The grub-worm viewed his fallen foe,
As mashed he did appear;
Then turning round, with haughty mien,
He walked off on his ear."

——Some drunken scoundrel made an indecent assault upon a lady on last Wednesday evening about nine o'clock. Fortunately her husband was near at hand and the beast received a wholesome and effectual thrashing for his malicious impudence. We frequently hear of ladies being insulted in this manner when on the street, unprotected, after night fall and earnestly hope that these brutal offenders may receive the punishment they so richly deserve. Won't the police force make a note of this?

——A bright little boy named Charles Campbell living in town, is to be educated for the ministry by the Presbyterian congregation of this place.

He is now attending the academy and will receive a complete collegiate and theological education, if he lives and carries out his good resolutions.

This is a very commendable action of the above church whose devout and energetic pastor is continually enlisting his congregation in some good work.

——A referance to our advertising columns will give our readers an idea as to who the leading and enterprising merchants of this place are. We do not wish to discriminate, but we always feel like recommending, as worthy of public patronage, those business men who do the most liberal and extensive advertising.

——Three talented young professional gentleman gave us a call on Saturday. W. A. Tobias reports his school to be in good condition, as all schools under his charge must be. G. L. Morelock brought his handsome corps of assistants from Beech Creek to spend the day, and Prof. Woods was doing the polite to them. Noble trio, call again.

——"The Forgemen's Mutual Benefit Society" is the name of a new order, organized by the employees of the Messrs. Valentine.

We are informed by one of the leaders of this organization, that its object is solely for mutual improvement and benefit and does not partake of the nature of most of the trades union.

——The Murdock Literary Society is quite an institution. The cool philosophy of Beck, in debate, is met and shivered to flinders by Deacon Cook's close reasoning and brilliant passes, while the District Attorney belabors an opponent's argument in true Ciceronian style.

The tragedy is done by George O. Boal and James Schofield after the lead of the great masters. While on the boards they would astonish an outsider. Sometimes their voices are soft and gentle as a shepherd's flute, again as plaintive and sad as a cold buckwheat cake, and anon fierce and turbulent as a clucking hen or the roar of a cataract. Queer geniuses and good fellows they are and their Society is a success.

——Joe W. Fury on 'Saturday paid his sixth visit home since he became the admiring father of a little boy baby, now about a month old. His many friends were disappointed that he had not been home for almost a week, and a large crowd of ladies and gentlemen called to see him on Saturday evening last. They brought baskets full of good things, and taking possession of establishment, prepared a gorgeous supper for the editorial father and his family. Tis said that Joe was sick on Sunday, but that his post-prandial speach was the one he makes use of on such "glo'rus 'casions." The boy is doing as well as could be expected.

——That gas machine at the Bush House is now in successful operation. Prof. Lowe, the inventor and patentee, came on and after giving the concern the finishing touches, touched it off. It works very well: the flame is bright, clear and regular. While the only change necessary to the pipes was substituting Argand burners for the old ones. The machinery is so removed from the building and the quantity of material is so trifling that there is not much more danger of explosion than there is in a tallow candle. The gas costs eighty cents per thousand feet which will make a saving of about one thousand dollars per year in the gas bill for Messrs. Wilkinson & Co.

——And now Brainard, he of the National, Plain Words, Tyrone Herald, latterly of the Altoona Custom House, and well known to the hardware interest hereabouts, is again to enter the journalistic field in the capacity of local editor of the Williamsport Daily Register. William Henry Harrison Brainard is just the man they want to fight his old enemy, Fury of the Standard. The dailies of that city have a pair of live roosters at their head now and we anticipate some lively spurring in those newspaporial cock-pits.

——Two much respected residents of Walker township died last week: Mark McKean, Esq., of consumption, and Mr. John Curner, from cancer of the stomach.

——Reported not very well—The young man in the West Ward who ate thirteen eggs.—Exchange.

It could not have been at the hotel—they do not lavish those berries in such large quantities, there. Perhaps the young man in question was a stranger, and, if so, he was only good for two eggs, sure; but the old regulars there get aggravated because they need eggs in the morning and ought to have them but don't get them. Eggs-actly so.

——J. M. Way & Son whose flouring mill burnt down about one year ago, have built a large brick establishment and are doing a fine trade in grain. The machinery of the two lower stories is run by water power and the two upper stories, by steam. The engine was built by Mr. Wm. P. Duncan and of course is a good one.

They have also a Saw mill and a large stock of lumber.

——The Episcopalians have been training six little boys of their congregation to sing in the choir. These little choristers have good voices and, with the careful training they are receiving will soon be able to appear in the Church service. We are pleased with this movement for there is not a choir of any account in town.

——Prof. Curns, the noted singing school man of Lock Haven, tried to organize a class here last week. He gave an exhibition of his vocal apparatus and skill in teaching in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., after which some effort was made to form a class, but the Professor struck a wrong lead and no class was raised.

——Mr. John Irwin Jr., Col. Wm. P. Wilson, Hons. A. O. Furst, Adam Hoy, and Ed. Blanchard left this place for Philadelphia on Monday last. We didn't hear exactly what object this delegation had in view, but suppose, of course, that their services are needed at the Constitutional Convention.

——Another harbinger of Spring—a white parasol carried by a handsome young lady on the street, Monday afternoon. We may now look with confidence for blue birds, robbins, straw hats and circuses.

——The delicate proprietor of Beck's Tobacco store has a new sign, a very neat, tasty affair, and tells the truth by saying that Beck sells first quality cigars at cheap rates.

——Furniture selling at cost, at O'Bryan's.

A RARE OCCASION.—It is seldom that Bellefonte does justice to a public entertainment of any kind, but home talent is sometimes appreciated. Here was an instance. It was a pair of concerts given by the colored people, on last Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Long before the curtain was raised the little colored church was filled to repletion.

The audience was mixed a little, i. e. all grades of society, from the "most select" to the demi-monde and down to the scavengers. Pea nuts and pie, cakes and bologna were served ad libitun. Imagine this audience with hands and months busy, when the sheets were drawn aside, revealing two score of old and young colored performers dressed in the most gorgeous and patriotic costumes. A medly composed expressly for the occasion, containing about all the national, religious and plantation airs in the catalogue, was sung in fine muscular style.

Then followed a recitation by a young lady dressed in red, white and blue. We could not exactly understand it, she seemed to be so much overcome with the sentiment of the piece, but it sounded like Mary and her little lamb, only it had so many more verses in it than the one we know. This was loudly applauded in the back seats.

Then followed some comic songs, after which a little Afri-American gave a shorter rendering of "Mary had a little lamb," which brought tears to the eyes of nearly all who were not eating.

Again the curtain was drawn and an importation-from Huntingdon county-a star-an opaque one—bounced in view from behind a quilt and with a gorgeous sweep of her massive train told the breathless crowd that she was "Madame Jinks of the Horse Marines." We thought she was for her voice seemed to give signs of the Epizooty. Mr. Hawkins and Billy Mills did the "Little fraud" finely and won an encore from the "Bush House aristocracy." Here followed a recitation by a small boy, it was only a single stanza, but all were affected, hankerchiefs were lifted to eyes dim with tears as we were again told, that "Mary had a little lamb." Poor Mary, bleating lamb,—we could not longer bear up under the thoughts of it, and in sorrow and silence left the entertainment. It was getting too warm for us.

——Died at Hublersburg, on Saturday morning, March 15, Mr. John Carner, aged 58. Mr. Carner died from the effects of a Cancer, which committed its ravages principally in the region of the chest, towards the close of his suffering, reaching the brain. For many weeks his pain was intense. For the last two weeks, much of the time was passed in delirium. The deceased leaves a wife and three children. The church and community mourn as one mourns for the loss of a brother. Mr. Carner was an honest man, which is pronounced by high authority to be the noblest work of God. He was a man of clear impressions, and strong conviction. His life gave a good illustration of an American citizen, one of the many sturdy men upon whom our government rest. Mr. Carner was a good farmer, industrious, economical, a man of thrift. He was generous in his public benefactions. He gave freely, and had plenty. In no point was the character of the deceased more striking than in his religious life. His convictions were clear, well defined. Of these he spoke freely everywhere. He was never afraid, nor ashamed to speak out his religious thoughts deeply imbedded in his soul. The funeral servics took place at his late residence on Monday morning, and a large concourse of friends followed his remains to the grave.

——Died at Zion March, 15. Mr. Mark McKeane of pulmonary consumption. The disease began with Asthma, and after struggling for years with the disorder, our young friend quietly passed away. He was greatly endeared to the family who had looked to him for counsel, and to whom he had been a kind and indulgent brother.

——Clearfield, Center Clinton, Forest, Elk, Lycoming and Union counties comprise the new congressional district. Where are you now, Republican aspirants for congressional honors?

——"We find that he came to his death from calling Bill Jackson a liar," was the verdict of a Coroner's jury in a Western town last week.

——Bed bugs are said to be making active preparations for the spring trade-or words to that effect.

——Fishing tackle is being hunted up and April first will be a lively day on the banks of Spring Creek.

——These lovely, balmy moonlight evenings serve to ripen the matrimonial harvest.

——We will soon publish an original serial story from the pen of one of our own citizens.

——St. Patrick's day was bright and pleasant as any day this Spring shure!

THE PUREST AND SWEETEST COD-LIVER OIL is Hazard & Caswell's, made on the sea shore, from fresh selected livers, by CASWELL, HAZARD & CO., New-York. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in market. 6-4w

CHAPPED HANDS, face, rough skin, pimples, ingworm, salt-rheum, and other cutaneous affections cured, and the skin made soft and smooth, by using the JUNIPER TAR SOAP, made by Caswell, Hazard & Co. MAGAZINES.

EVERY article in LOCKE'S NATIONAL MONTHLY (Lock & Jones, Toledo, Ohio,) for March, is noticeable. The opening chapters of "One Divorce and One Death," an attractive serial by George Wainwright to run through three numbers, give promise of the best magazine story of the day. Mr. D. R. Lock contributes two humorous sketches or stories. Miss Ella F. Morley, a Virginia lady, writes a striking and unique article on the style of Charles Dickens. "Only a Hand" by A. Corbett Chase and "Was it Death" by Richard Grant, attract by their originality of thought, their departure from the usual line, and the well sustained interest of the narrative. They are both fine specimens of the first-class short story. Mr. Wm. H. Bushey gives us the fourth instalment of "Mrs. Simpson's Troubles," a new experiment, we may say in the way of a pleasant, tantalizing, sketchy serial. The poems are "Theopolus Rees" by Mrs. K. M. Sherwood, and a "Sunset Legend" by Olive C. Ferris. An article on "Our Railway Kings," giving reminiscences of the Vanderbilts and others, is particularly interesting at this time.

The Monthly is mailed to subscribers at $1 00 per annum, or sold by newsdealers for ten cents per number. The three numbers containing Mr. Walnwright's story will be sent to any address for twenty-five cents. Address,

☞BY ONE OF THE LEADING PHYSICIANS of Philadelphia city.—A careful examination of mortuary statistics established the fact that one adult person out of every six dies of consumption, and so alarmingly is this disease gaining the ascendancy over all other ills to which flesh is heir, that its approach to one's immediate circle is regarded with perfect horror. If you will carefully examine the records of Materia Medica you will invariably discover that the general want of success in treating diseases has not been a deficiency of pathological knowledge of the functions affected, but of a suitable compound that would act upon the disease and all the sympathetic affections.

This want has at last been met in the Bitter Wine of Iron, prepared by the celebrated Dr. E. F. Kunkle, No 259 North Ninth street, Philadelphia. This excellent compound can be taken by persons with the most delicate stomach without any debilitating effect always giving strength and largely increasing the nervous energy of the patient. In all cases of pulmonary complaints it is admirably adapted to relieve the severity of the symptoms in the advanced stages of the disease, or to arrest it in its incipiency. If you want something that will give you strength, a good appetite, build up your constitution, and in place of moroseness and a lack of energy, give you a brisk and vigorous feeling, try Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron. It has already received the meed of praise from thousands who have tested its virtues, and for many years maintained its reputation with unfaded popularity.

Price $1 per bottle. E. F. KUNKEL, Sole Proprietor, No. 259 North Ninth street, below Vine, Philadelphia.
